

My Story:

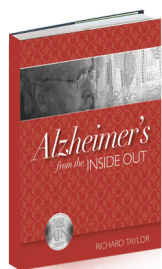

I am Richard Taylor, Ph.D, and for nearly a decade I have lived with the diagnosis of dementia, probably of the Alzheimer's type. I have discovered that thinking, speaking, and writing about what it is like for me to live with this condition has become the new purpose of my life.

I will tell my story from the inside out, so that others affected by the challenges of dementia can speak up, share their thoughts, and take life-affirming actions to improve dignity, quality of life, and sense of purpose for all of us who are aging.

By sharing, we can demystify and disarm Alzheimer's disease and create a joint sense of purpose.

Thanks.
Richard
